1. In one or two sentences explain the relationship between this week's reading(s) and the theme assigned (see <https://dci180.wludci.info/schedule/>) for this week.

2. List assigned this week's reading(s) and note which are scholarly writing and which are public/popular writing. Let us know how you know. See <http://guides.lib.berkeley.edu/c.php?g=83917&p=3747680> for info on evaluating resources example: The Prushinskaya article "The Quantified Baby." is popular literature given the type of magazine it is published in. The Atlantic, is considered a journalistic news source and the article does not have a formal work cited section. All citations in the article are hyperlinks to other articles that are mainly popular (such as NPR). Not much info is given about the authority/background of the author and the reader needs no special training/education to understand the content presented.

3. Self Reflection:

- a. Give us one insight you learned from what you have read for this week:
